“Speaking of Law and Religion”

A Symposium to Celebrate 25 Years of Conversation on the Shape and Quality of our Common Life

The founding of the Journal of Law and Religion twenty-five years ago opened an on-going, vibrant and wide-ranging conversation to explore the interaction and intersection of law and religion in shaping and contributing to the quality of our common life. This conversation has been interdisciplinary from the outset, but over the years it has increasingly drawn participants from the many religious traditions and cultures found around the world.

Today the Journal is an internationally respected forum within which scholars, “speaking of law and religion,” have been brought together to engage each other and the disciplines of law and religion. This dialogue has considered with utmost seriousness their joint responsibility, and that of these two disciplines, for the creation of a civilization of genuine peace and justice in which all might flourish.

On the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Journal, we are taking time over three days, October 23-25, 2008, both to celebrate what that conversation has produced, and to foster its continuation through reflection on the past, in light of the challenges of the future as we encounter them in our present circumstances. In the course of these days of reflection we may well redefine the future work of the Journal, while we rededicate ourselves to the conversation that makes our work come to life.

Hamline University is located in the heart of the Twin Cities, halfway between the downtowns of Saint Paul and Minneapolis. The Twin Cities are known for a quality of life unmatched in metropolitan areas of equal size. Renowned for their cultural life and first-class entertainment and leisure activities, the Twin Cities offer dozens of theaters, orchestras, jazz and popular musical groups, museums, professional and collegiate sports, world-class shopping experiences, restaurants, and clubs. The area is also well known for its hundreds of lakes, more than 1,000 parks, two zoos, and miles of biking, hiking, and ski trails.
